The Caribbean Cove Cooks for Reggae on the River

Berkeley, Calif., March 19, 2006 — The Caribbean Cove is pleased to announce that, once again, the restaurant has secured the contract for backstage cooking for Reggae on the River 2006, this August, in Humboldt county. In addition, Chef O'Loughlin will prepare boxed meals for Reggae artists arriving at San Francisco airport from the islands and boarding buses for the ride north to the show. The contract award comes on the heels of two days of backstage cooking for reggae artists at Reggae Days at the Santa Cruz Civic Auditorium.

Carol Bruno, Reggae on the River event organizer, said "Chef O'Loughlin has cooked backstage for us for several years, and we keep inviting her back because all the artists love her authentic Caribbean cooking." In addition, reggae musicians routinely stop by The Caribbean Cove restaurant in Berkeley while on tour in the San Francisco Bay area, with recording artist Glen Washington most recently giving an interview to Caribbean TV1 in the restaurant dining room.

O' Loughlin said "We're just pleased to be a part of the Caribbean music ecosystem in the Bay area, and to share in the good vibes that go down up in Humboldt County at Reggae on the River." Both O'Loughlin and Bruno encouraged festival-goers to buy their tickets and book early as Reggae on the River gets more popular with each passing year.
